*Of varieties so marked the number of plants available is less than 100.

To serve as a commercial variety a peony must have good color, a fairly good stem, must open easily, must stand as a cut-flower without wilting, must last several days after cutting, and must come out of cold storage without falling to pieces. A variety deficient in some of these points may still be admirable for the home market, for home use, or for garden or landscape effect. Of this list, besides those already noted, the following are good commercial varieties: Festiva Maxima, Octavie Demay, Lutea Plenissima, Mme. de Verneville, Blanche Cire, Duchesse de Nemours, Meissonier, Virginie, Queen Victoria, Felix Crousse, La Reine, Delicatissima, Modele de Perfection, Claire Dubois.

For cut flowers it is desirable to have a succession, the first flowers of the season bringing a little extra demand. The heaviest sales are for Decoration Day and for graduation exercises, and a large share of the planting should be selected to give blooms for these occasions. As the seasons vary, it is necessary to have also varieties that come earlier, but any good commercial habit of bloom can be held a week or ten days in a good ice box.

When the blooms are wanted for cut flowers, all side-buds should be pinched out when small, and all blooms should be cut before fully open. When the blooms are to be shipped or stored, the buds should be cut when only well started to open.

Peonies should be kept well cultivated, and free of grass and weeds. Outside of that they require but little care or attention, a clump costing about as much per year to grow as a hill of potatoes; and a very large value of capital in investment and of income, can be planted and managed in a comparatively small space. Unless the yards of your town are already well supplied with peonies, a planting of good varieties is sure to create an energetic demand both for cut flowers and for plants.

IRISES

Ochroleuca. Orientalis Gigantea. White with orange blotch. This is one of the most superb of all hardy irises. Apogon type. $6.00.

Sibrica Dark Blue. Sanguinea (?). $3.00.

German, Gertrude. Blue. 3.00 per 100.

German, Cielgialtt. Blue. Stately, like Pailida Dalmatica, but smaller, darker, of exquisite fragrance, a remarkably healthy grower, and a solid mass of color when in bloom. $5.00.

German, Pallida Dalmatica. $3.00.
